Tinley Board Passes Special License

The special license ordinance of Tinley Park which requires every business establishment in the village to pay a special tax, was finally passed by the Village Board at a special meeting Tuesday night.

The ordinance was discussed by the business men with the members of the village council for quite sometime and a number of changes have been made from the original draft.

The ordinance in its entirety is printed in this issue. A Read it over for your information.

All the various classes of businesses to be found in Tinley are listed, also some who do not operate at present. The revenue derived from these special licenses go toward paying for the cost of operating the local government.

The only exemptions made are in the case of shows and dances given by local talent for local benefit. No licenses are then required.

What Does Xmas Mean to You?

Christmas has many different meanings. Thru-out this wide world today Do your thoughts turn to pleasure? Is Christmas just another day?

Will you think of those in sorrow, Of those who cannot see their way, Of those who really dread tomorrow Will they be sad on Christmas Day?

Will you find a joy in living, Will you find that you are blest, Will you do a little giving That others may have happiness?

Now, is it just a time to make merry, To sing and shout, eat and drink While others in the silence, tarry Or is it a time to stop and think?

Is it a time, a place and duty To reconstruct and build within A stronger inner spiritual structure More perfect than its ever been.

And will you worship gifts and treasures Will you turn to thoughts of Christ, And the values one can't measure That are won by sacrifice.

Finds Interesting Family Picture In Magazine

Stokes Nebeker had an interesting experience the past week. He was reading a Life magazine of the December 1938 issue when he came across a picture of two little boys who appeared to have a pet aversion about having their pictures taken and the picture was headed "Bad Boys". The following letter appeared in connection with the picture: "I came across this old photograph among some family albums. I do not know the names of the two boys—who by this time, if still alive, are probably men in their forties at least. But the story goes that their mother brought them over very difficult roads a distance of 30 or 40 miles to Salt Lake City to have their pictures taken. Every time the photographer was ready they would cry and squirm. Finally in desperation, the mother told the photographer to take it willy-nilly, because 'that was the way they looked most of the time any way.'"

—Virginia Williams, Carmel, Cal.
Mr. Nebeker after reading the note, remembered seeing the same picture in the family album of his parents in Salt Lake City and recognized the pictures as being those of his brothers Hazelton and Delbert of Salt Lake City. Both are living. Their mother, Mrs. Acquilla Nebeker, resided at Logan, Utah at the time the picture was taken.

Yellowley, head of the federal alcohol tax unit, said his men seized 11,571 gallons of mash, 43 gallons of alcohol, and 236 empty five-gallon tins. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Is the Universe, including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, December 22.

The Golden Text was, "Thus saith the Lord that created the heavens: God himself that formed the earth and made it; . . . I am the Lord; and there is none else" (Isaiah 45:18).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good" (Genesis 1:1, 26, 31).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them" (p. 295).

It is hoped that this sign may help to lessen collisions at this extremely bad corner.

People Hurt Themselves the Hard Way During Most Unusual Accidents of 1940

By PAUL JONES

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO.—Each year a surprising number of people discover new and novel ways of getting hurt. And the results are positively startling.

A man in Chicago, for example, is bitten by his own false teeth. A steel executive in Colorado rides out of his office on the cowcatcher of a locomotive.

Some of these odd accidents are amusing. Others are tragic. Put them all together and you find that Fate, the master showman, again has produced a literal hit parade of the year—the Oddities of 1940.

So, without further ado, on with the show!

Chief Clerk John Donnelly of the Cleveland Municipal court is quite a reader and frequently has his nose in a book. But one March day this year he had his nose in book ends—and it wasn't comfortable.

Mr. Donnelly was moving several books, in book ends, from one table to another. The books began to slip and he tried to push them back between the book ends with his chin. But the books fell anyway, and the book ends came plopping together with Mr. Donnelly's nose between them. It was well red.

Louis Durdy of Pana, Ill., can understand now why the man in the Bible had so much trouble finding a good Samaritan. Smelling smoke one November afternoon, Mr. Durdy dashed into a nearby hotel room and rescued a sleeping guest from a flaming mattress. Firemen came, seized the burning bedding and tossed it out the window. It landed on an automobile parked outside the hotel.

Yes, it was Mr. Durdy's auto. The auto was burned up, and so was Mr. Durdy—plenty!

Joseph Callahan of Chicago always had taken good care of his false teeth and, so far as he knew, they had no reason to dislike him. But one day as he dozed, he slipped off his chair. His teeth fell out and landed tooth-side up on the floor. Mr. Callahan's forehead struck them and they gave him a vicious bite.

Mr. Jay J. Martin, of Pueblo, Colo., is ready to believe that almost anything can happen in the steel business. Mr. Martin, a steel company executive, was seated at his desk one day, intending to stay there a while, when the next thing he knew, what was he doing but riding out of his office on the cowcatcher of a full-fledged locomotive!

At the end of his journey, which took him through a partition or so, Mr. Martin, understandably travel stained, learned that what had happened was that the locomotive had jumped the track just outside his office and had come on in through the wall. Mr. Martin didn't take the same train back.

Drinks Brake Fluid.

Bill Hiltbrand, of Springfield, Mo., knows now just how a hydraulic brake feels. He was drinking a bottle of soda pop in a filling station and discussing politics with a friend. Engrossed, he picked up a bottle and took a big swig. It wasn't the right bottle, and it wasn't even pop. It was brake fluid! The results weren't serious, however, for,

Only a bumper guard prevented this automobile from plunging into Lake Michigan after it skidded out of control on an icy pavement. The driver escaped with a ducking. Some of the many other freak accidents of 1940 described in the story below are illustrated above.

as you might expect, Mr. Hiltbrand was able to stop quickly.

Ever so often, it seems, some poor soul has to have his pants jerked off in public by an automobile. This year's victim of Fate's perennial gag was Mr. Giovanni Evangelisti, of Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. E. was waiting, believe it or not, for a street car in the crowded downtown district when the door handle of a passing automobile caught the Evangelisti trousers and neatly swooshed them off. The apologetic driver rushed Mr. E. home for replacements.

Calf Lassoed Man.

When a calf lassoed a man—that's noose! The man, Edward Acree, was walking along a road near Brazil, Ind., when the man-puncher calf broke loose from its tethering stake and dashed across the highway, its chain swinging. Mr. Acree complains that the next thing he knew the calf had lassoed him with the chain.

Bob Forde, strolling along in Marysville, Calif., wondered why the two men approaching him were walking so far apart. It wasn't neighborly. Mr. Forde decided to go between them. By the time he discovered they were carrying a big sheet of window glass, it was too late. Mr. Forde describes the experience as painful.

Walter Bell, a rural mail carrier of Harlan, Iowa, has heard of people fighting buzz saws, and he believes he can appreciate what they are up against. On a warm day this summer Mr. Bell plugged a six-volt fan into an 110-volt socket. The fan, the sissy, couldn't take it and leaped whirling toward Mr. Bell like an airplane. He raised his arm to stop it. Result: 35 stitches.

Inflates Arm.

Elmer Mahnke is one of the people who fear quick inflation. This perhaps is understandable in view of an experience Mr. Mahnke had this year.

Mr. Mahnke is a filling station man at Racine, Wis., and part of his job, of course, is to blow up footballs and basketballs for small boys in the neighborhood. On the occasion to which we refer the air needle not only pierced a basketball, but Mr. Mahnke's arm. The first thing he knew his arm was bigger than Popeye's.

Never have more things happened to the Kaczynski family, of the Pittsburgh Kaczynskis, than on a cold day last winter.

First, six-year-old Frank Kaczynski grabbed a charged wire and couldn't let go. Then his brother Walter, eight, grabbed Frank, and he couldn't let go. Then sister Anna, 17, heard about it and dashed for the scene, just in time to see her sister, Frances, 14, get struck by a car. As Anna ran to help Frances, a big dog ran up and bit Anna.

The commotion attracted brother John Kaczynski, 24. John chased the dog away and a few minutes later the Kaczynskis began pouring into the hospital.

Frank and Walter were treated for burns, Frances for cuts and bruises and Anna for dog bite. The police sergeant who wrote it all up for the records was treated for writer's cramp and fervently hopes that if it all ever happens again, it will happen to Smiths.

In Chicago a dignified old gentleman was standing on a safety island, waiting for a street car and having no intention whatsoever of taking a taxicab. But he did. For as a passing taxi swerved sharply to miss another car, the back door flew open. It scooped up the nice old gentleman and deposited him gently on the floor of the cab, all set for a ride.

As Ralph Lyman of Clarinda, Iowa, hurried to answer the phone he slipped and fell, but crawled painfully on to hear a voice say, "This is Doctor Burnett. Can you come right over and look at my furnace? It's broken."

"You'd better come right over and look at my leg first," replied Lyman. "It's broken, too."

And it was! Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Mann of Indianapolis weren't expecting anyone to drop in on them that day last winter. But 22 students of Indiana university did—in a bus! Mr. Mann was that surprised he thought it was an earthquake shaking the house. But Mrs. Mann wasn't so sure, and when she investigated she found a big bus poking its nose through the basement wall. The bus was taking the students back to school from a vacation and the driver had swerved to miss an auto.

Herbert Greenwald of Berwyn, Ill., is a meticulous golfer and always tries to have his eye on the ball. But one day in October Mr. Greenwald switched the formula and had the ball on his eye.

Swinging lustily in the rough, Mr. Greenwald struck the ball squarely. It hit a nearby stone concealed in the grass, ricocheted straight upward and broke Mr. Greenwald's glasses into bits. The unhappy golfer not only was cut about the face, but he lost a stroke—and it was match play!

Mrs. Olen Deatherage of Springfield, Ill., knew that some women drivers can make an automobile do some mighty funny things. But she never dreamed she could run over herself, until she did it. Her car spun around after a collision, throwing her out the right hand door. Her body hit the gear lever and shoved the gear from low to reverse. As she fell from the car it backed up over her.

Yes, in these days anything can happen—and does!

Many a pedestrian has been struck by a hit and run driver. But to Mrs. Anna Martinelli of Johnston, R. I., goes the distinction of being the victim of a hit and run dog which itself was the victim of a hit and run driver. The driver hit the dog and fled. The dog hit Mrs. Martinelli and fled. Mrs. Martinelli did not flee. She had been knocked unconscious by the dog. Her injuries were not serious.

These are but a smattering of the many freak accidents of 1940 recorded in the files of the National Safety Council in Chicago.

of guns and firearms also increased. Soft drink manufacturers report new sales records; candy sales are up, the report goes on. Out of more pay envelopes and fatter pay envelopes the public bought 25 per cent more theater tickets and admissions to other amusements. It purchased 25 per cent more radios and radio equipment; the boom in sales of this last named item can probably be partially credited to interest in war news and in the political campaign just finished, the report comments.

Warfare Becomes an Art

The technique of camouflage is being developed to a fine art by the U. S. army. You would have to get close to the machine-gun nest above before you could identify it for the death trap that it is, and then your identification would come too late. These soldiers are shown practicing at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Americans Spent More,

Earned More Last Year

MINNEAPOLIS.—Americans are going places and doing things with their rearmament prosperity; during 1940 they bought a billion gallons more gasoline, 600,000 more automobiles, 25 per cent more entertainment, 13,000,000 gallons more liquor, and 6,000,000 more cigarettes than by this time last year, according to a buying summary made by Northwestern National Life Insurance company. Gliders offer opportunity to teach young aviators fundamentals of flying... Washington observers question policy of giving England only half of arms output.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Germany's huge supply of trained airplane pilots is due, in very large part, to the fact that, during the long period after the first World war, in which she was not allowed to have armament, her youth went in for gliding.

America, many authorities are contending, should do the same thing, not because there is any legal restriction on military planes in this country, but because the development of gliding as a sport for youth would provide an enormous reservoir from which the army and navy air forces could draw in an emergency.

Commander Eugene F. McDonald Jr. of the naval reserve quotes Ernest Udet, the German flier, as saying that from 250,000 to 300,000 young Germans learned to fly, in the period just before the outbreak of the World war, in inexpensive gliders.

American boys are even more adapted to this sport than the young Germans, McDonald points out. And the great advantage of glider flying is that it is within the possibilities of so many more American boys proportionately. If put into quantity production, good gliders could be sold, McDonald contends, for about $150 each. But the big factor is that there is little upkeep for gliders. The chief expense, after the sail planes are acquired, is an old automobile for towing and the gasoline to run it.

FAVORS FREE GLIDERS

Many experts think that one of the most economical expenditures the United States government could make would be to supply gliders free to boys' clubs. Orders for as many planes as would be demanded, should this be started, would result in a very low price per sail-plane, perhaps as low as the $150 Commander McDonald calculates.

The chief advantage of glider training for prospective airplane pilots is that they are forced to learn all about air conditions, particularly rising currents, air pockets, down drafts and how to take advantage of them.

Many of the important improvements in radio, McDonald says, were first conceived by the radio amateurs, of whom he estimates there are at least 54,000 in this country. He predicts that many improvements in aviation will be devised by amateurs if we can get our boys enthusiastic about glider clubs.

BRITAIN NEEDS PLANES

Mysterious to many observers is President Roosevelt's attitude on the present system of giving Britain half of America's military aircraft production and giving the other half for our own defense. It does not seem to these observers to fit in with the underlying notion of many persons that unless Great Britain wins this war the United States is in trouble, and hence every possible aid should be extended to Britain, not so much as an unselfish line of action as one of very real but intelligent selfishness.

If Britain vitally needs more fighting and bombing planes, of which there seems to be no doubt whatever, it would seem that the interests of the United States—once it is accepted that if Britain goes down we are in trouble—would require that Britain be given every fighting plane this country can produce.

It is very simple to say that if Winston Churchill's warnings had been heeded (he said as long ago as 1917 that Britannia must rule the clouds as well as the waves) there would have been no such terrific bombing of London and the Midlands as Britain has undergone. It would be just as simple to say that if the warnings in this country voiced by Gen. William Mitchell had been heeded, from 1920 until his court martial in 1925, this country would now be in a position to supply Britain as well as our own defense with all the planes needed.

WARNINGS IGNORED

The facts are too simple for that. The facts are that old-fashioned high commands in both the British and United States army and navy made compliance with such warnings impossible.

Recrimination NOW is of no especial value. Most of the men who disagreed with Churchill in Britain and Billy Mitchell here were sincere in their views. The point is: What should be done now? There is no doubt that Britain is STILL in danger. Whether the island can be fed despite the constant destruction of merchant shipping by bombers, added to the shipping toll taken by mines and submarines, depends very largely on the number of planes that can be sent her from America. Meanwhile we are building up capacity to produce planes for our own defense.

You're paying a part of this bill: Santa's middle men predict a $183,000,000 national toy bill this year, which would be about the same as was spent last year to spread cheer among the youngsters. The array around American Christmas trees this season, including toys, will cost each family an average of $62.50, according to reliable surveys.

There's another side to it. Between 250,000 and 300,000 persons are being added to the nation's payrolls during the holiday rush, and the turnover should raise total 1940 sales for the year to at least last year's volume of nearly $40,000,000,000.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Virgie Morgan, widow, and owner of the Morgan paper mill in the Carolina mountain district, turns down a marriage proposal from Wallace Withers. He leaves in a rage. Branford Wills, a young stranger, who has been lost in the mountains for three days, finds his way to the Morgan home. He is fed and allowed to remain overnight. He identifies himself as a government employee, working with surveyors in the district. Wills develops pneumonia and is forced to remain in the household. Marian, Virgie's daughter, dislikes Wills. Trouble is developing as Withers meets Stanley Daniels, the mill's chemist. Virgie learns someone is attempting to obtain title to timber lands owned by Tom Pruitt, life-long friend of her deceased husband and part owner of the mill. She advises Tom to clear up title to his property. A love affair is developing between Daniels and Lucy Fields, Virgie's secretary. Withers attempts to bargain with Daniels to have him help in getting possession of the Morgan mill. Daniels refuses.

"No—nope. I don't aim to sell none. I figure to hang on to that. I'll save up the money. I got a little saved already." Old Tom locked the safe carefully, wiped off the shining knobs with a blue handkerchief.

"Well, good night," Daniels put on his coat, went out.

He walked away slowly, but his thoughts were racing. Wallace Withers' words came back to his mind. Virgie Morgan, so the dry old man had said, did not own all the stock of the mill. There was a block of stock loose—and now Stanley Daniels knew where that stock was.

CHAPTER V

Branford Wills improved rapidly. His breathing ceased to rasp through the room and, though his voice was little more than a reedy croak, his cracked lips managed to frame a scrap of a smile whenever Marian Morgan came into view.

For days, while Wills was ill, Marian had been strangely gentle and quiet and concerned. Born electrical, difficult, and with a dainty chip forever poised on her shoulder, she was troubled by this new uncertainty that came over her whenever she took her turn at watching in the sick-room. And when Wills' eyes lost the vagueness of fever and began to survey the scene with new, masculine interest, she withdrew a little, turned tart and airy, though whenever she hurled an acid barb her heart recoiled as though the point had pierced herself.

And Wills refused to be humble. He had, so he had told Virgie several times, an insurance policy that would take care of the expense of this illness. He was profoundly grateful but there was dignity in his attitude. He would not fawn nor placate—and the indomitable fire in Marian crackled against the cool steel of his assurance, till sparks flew far and wide.

Virgie Morgan observed her daughter, with a dry and quizzical smile on her face.

In a world where she walked in mastery, meeting bankers and bark-choppers on their own ground, Virgie was abashed only by her own daughter. Marian could make her aware that her hair-pins were loose and that she needed to buy a better fitting corset.

Virgie liked young Wills, but she kept a still tongue around the house and watched Marian with wise amused eyes. But when Tom made remarks at the office she cut him off curly.

"Ain't that feller never going?" Tom demanded. "He hit it pretty soft, looks to me. Good thing he didn't knock on my door."

"That's your torn-down stinging!" Virgie snapped. "You don't need to live like white trash, Tom Pruitt! Have you taken those papers up to Pratt like I told you to?"

"No'm." Tom was swiftly meek. "I ain't had time."

"If you lose everything that rightfully belongs to you it's nobody's fault but your own."

"Bill Gallup was over—from the power-house. He said he wanted to see you."

"Bill always wants to see me. He wants me to junk a good steam plant, that's been turning this mill for twenty years, and put in motors. I don't blame Bill. He's a smart young fellow trying to get along."

She went home tired, out of patience with Tom and his affairs and a little out of patience with herself. Marian was right. She ought not to be trailing around in the wet woods, doing man-chores, things she had kept on doing because David had always done them.

Her throat was raw and burned now, from exposure and wet feet. Marian had said that a woman in her position ought to have more pride, and that was true, too. David had kept his hand on every operation of the mill, kept the plant going on the old hand-craft system of the ancient guild. But David had been a man—and those days were passing.

What she needed, she had been telling herself for days, was a young man to take over a lot of this responsibility that was getting her down. Tom was all right so far as his ability went but the slightest acceleration of pace left Tom hopelessly behind. He was still living and working in a day when the men had carried pulp out of the warehouses on their backs. He could not keep step. He liked to spend a whole morning tinkering with a fifty-cent lock on an oil house. He was getting old.

"Not that I'm so young any more myself," Virgie humored her rheumatic twinges, "but I haven't begun to collect moss on the north side of me."

"Hello," she said, as she entered the sick-room. "How does life look this morning? Any brighter?"

Mr. Wills turned on his engaging and gallant grin.

"Swell," he croaked in his husky whisper.

"He et all his breakfast," beamed Ada Clark, "and he's only got one degree. I took it twice to see."

"Go on down and eat, Ada," Virgie ordered. "I'll sit here a few minutes."

Ada departed and young Wills followed her starched back with an impish grimace. "The stars," he said, "are propitious today. Virgo just looked it up in the book."

"Too bad something propitious doesn't happen to poor Ada. A widow with six children would be just grand. Look here, I sent her out because I want to talk to you," Virgie edged her rocker nearer the bed. "Do you still think the pulp people are the despoilers of the earth?"

"Do you have to keep rubbing it in, all the time? I'm so low now I could walk out of this room without opening the door. You've been so fine to me, Mrs. Morgan, that I'm keeping on living just to pay you back. I might be lying over there in the laurel now, like that poor photographer."

"You got yourself out of the laurel. I didn't. And I didn't take you in for pay. I'm a mountain woman. What I want to talk to you about is, what comes next. What do you figure you'll do when you get loose from Ada and the zodiac?"

He wrinkled his forehead and his dry lips straightened. "I'll go back to Washington, probably. If I have any job left there. I hope I won't be a nuisance to you much longer—and I have to pay, you know—this nurse and the doctor."

"I wish you'd hush up about paying and let me say what I want to say before Ada bounces back. You say you may not have any job in Washington. If you had a job here do you suppose you could stand it—or would it be too painful to you to work for pulp people?"

He clutched the mattress, turning on his shoulder, dull color burning in his face.

"You mean—you'd give me a job—after—"

"I haven't said so, directly. I'm just speculating. I couldn't pay very much and I'd work you hard. I work myself hard. There's no mercy in me. I'm a hard old woman, but I'm fair. But—I'm going places with my mill—and I'd take the people along who work for me and play fair with me. Don't make up your mind suddenly—mine isn't made up yet."

"I think that I'd rather work for you than for anybody I've ever met," he said, "but I might not be much use."

"People who work for me have to be of use," Virgie rose, briskly, and gave her corset the usual disciplinary jerk. "Well, good-by—I'd better get to work. You'll have a quiet day. Lossie's got washing to do and Marian is organizing the Little Theatre."

"Your child," said Mr. Wills, "does not like me."

"There are times," Virgie grinned dryly, "when she doesn't admire me a whole lot, but maybe we'll grow in grace."

She went downstairs and out to her muddy old car. She was wondering, as she drove toward the town if she had been a sentimental old fool. Tom would say so—and so would Marian. But Marian had had the idea in the first place.

She said nothing to Tom about young Branford Wills. Tom wanted to carry on the pulp business with a double-bitted ax and a wheelbarrow. He was rooted, hating change, fearing it. She was exasperated with him anyway.

Her exasperation increased when she found Bill Gallup waiting for her. Lucy was typing at a furious pace, as she always did whenever a man sat in the chair beside Virgie's desk.

"Hello, Bill," she said, as she spiked her limp hat and bumped her brief-case down. "Are you back again to try to talk me into throwing away a good old boiler that has been tooting our whistle for going on thirty years?"

"No," Bill punched out a cigarette. "I'd like to see that ancient kettle go into scrap, of course, and you've got to come to it sooner or later. But I'll wait. Wait till a couple of engineers and a fireman or two go out through that rusty roof of yours. But that isn't what's on my mind today. I wanted to talk about a tract of hardwood timber over across the ridge on Little Fork. I found out that Pruitt has a first-mortgage lien on it."

"What about it?"

"Some eastern timber grabbers are after it. Fellow named Cragg stayed at my house last night. I heard, after he left, that they have raided a piece already over on the Tennessee side—moved in and cut it off quick before the different claimants could get together and get court action. They have papers usually that will hold water—stand off the courts for a while. Then they settle for about a tenth of what the timber's worth—and leave the land worthless"

Virgie had not sat down. Her mobile face had stiffened into grim lines.

"Lucy! Get Willis Pratt on the line. Tell him to get over here right away. And then go out in the mill and find Tom Pruitt. Tell him I want him—quick."

Willis Pratt was not in his office. He was, so Lucy reported, after much telephoning, over at the county-seat trying a case concerning a cow hit by a switch engine.

Virgie and Tom and young Bill Gallup sat for an hour in the office, looking at each other, Tom uneasily and unhappily, Virgie with an accusing grimace about the set of her mouth, young Bill too interested to depart.

"If they get into that timber before you can get an injunction, Tom Pruitt, and make it stick," Virgie said, savagely, "it's your own fault for being so dumb."

Tom said nothing. He rose and jammed on his old hat.

"You come back here!" Virgie shrieked at him. "We're going to wait here for Willis Pratt. Lucy got a call through."

But Tom did not turn back nor answer. He went across the yard

"Do you still think the pulp people are the despoilers of the earth?"

and out the gate, along a hard path by the railroad tracks. The path turned sharply up a gullied hill through a gap in an old fence and Tom turned, too, heading for the little unpainted house on a knob behind the town, where for forty years he had lived.

He unlocked the heavy padlock and opened the door, into a wide, dark room that smelled of ashes and unaired clothing and ancient grease.

Over the fireplace hung two long rifles, polished and shining in a place where nothing else was clean. Tom took them both down, opened a tin safe, and brought out oil and rags and a slim ramrod.

He was a mountain man.

CHAPTER VI

Three days passed and Tom did not come back.

Virgie grew anxious and irritable, snapping at every one, exasperated at Tom.

"The contrary old mule!" she stormed, as she poked at the fire. "What's he pouting about, anyway? After I go to a lot of trouble to save his timber land for him, he goes off in a sulk! I afraid he'll have to go to court, I suppose."

Lucy Fields, sitting meekly at her desk, chirped an agreement. "Do you want me to go to Tom's house, Mrs. Morgan, and see what has happened to him?"

"No, I don't. It's a mile and all uphill. You'll go traipsing around in that thin coat and get pneumonia, and then where will I be? I haven't got enough trouble, shipments late and stove full of ashes—"

"I'll have Jerry clean those out. They were so busy in the yard I hated to stop them."

"Let Jerry alone. And don't pay any attention to me either. I'm tired. I'm going to have a man around here to take some of this work off my shoulders. I've hired that young Wills up at my house, to start in Monday. He ought to be well enough by that time. You can tell the boys he's going to work here. Well, what are you looking like that for?"

Lucy's face had changed oddly. Her sensitive mouth had straightened and stiffened a little, her eyes looked frightened first and then withdrew and were guarded and unhappy.

"What's on your mind?" Virgie persisted. "Is there any reason why I shouldn't hire a man to get timber in and pulp out and go wading around in wet woods, instead of doing it myself?"

"None at all, Mrs. Morgan," Lucy's voice was small and prim. "I was just thinking—I was wondering if the boys in the mill were going to like having a stranger put over them—an outsider."

Virgie's broad, amiable face burned with crimson patches and her eyes were as metallic as gun sights.

"Listen, here!" she said, grimly. "If you hear any remarks around this property about who's hired or who isn't, you tell those hillbillies I'm running this mill, will you?"

"Yes, Mrs. Morgan."

"And for gosh sakes," Virgie fairly snorted, "don't be so darned humble!"

"I won't, Mrs. Morgan."

"Get Perry Bennett on the telephone. Tell him I want an answer about that spruce acreage today."

"He told Tom he had decided not to sell."

"He always decides not to sell. Then he boggles around and devils my life out of me to get the price up. But he always sells. Tell him if he wants to talk to me to come over here."

Lucy Fields went home that night in an uneasy state of mind. She had worked for and loved Virgie Morgan loyally for several years, she would have defended Virgie passionately against any criticism, but now she had a feeling that Virgie's generous impulses had betrayed her. This young Wills might be a very fine fellow—but Lucy had a feeling that he would not be a success in the Morgan mill.

Stanley Daniels was coming to call. She would talk to him about it. But she was quite certain that he was not going to be pleased either.

But at night when she went home, she forgot Branford Wills in her excitement over Daniels' visit.

The house was in confusion, as always. Lucy hurried from room to room, opening the outer doors to get the smell of coffee and frying out of the house; ignoring her mother's peevish complaints, whisking and brushing, hiding away the bottle of liniment, the lurid calendars, and the handleless souvenir tea-cup filled with matches that decorated the mantel shelf.

She washed up the dust of spilled ashes and brought out the two precious embroidered pillows she had worked in lonely evenings.

"Anybody'd think some king was coming!" protested Mrs. Fields peevishly from the dishpan. "You're the one that's always complaining about coal costing so much, and now you're trying to heat up a whole county. Just because you've got a beau coming—"

"He isn't my beau. Can't I have one friend without a lot of excitement and hysteria over it? Other girls have company and go out places—"

"They don't tear the house down to please their company, I'll bet!"

Lucy closed the doors with a patient sigh. There was little use, the sigh said, trying to be anybody. Stanley Daniels would look at all her pathetic artifices—the rug pulled a little crooked to cover a hole in the old carpet, the picture hung too high to hide the stain on the wall-paper. He would be amused. But at least he was coming. He had stopped at the office to tell her so, and she had to hurry to press her good dress and be ready.

The dress was old but the soft shade of blue helped the paleness of Lucy's coloring, and the lace bow she contrived at the throat had an air. Her hair fluffed softly over her ears and the dab of rouge she put on made her eyes brighter.

"Well," remarked Mrs. Fields, hanging up her apron, "having a feller sets you up. You look real nice."

"I'm going to fix cocoa ready to heat, Mother, and put the cups on the tray. And, Mother, please don't nibble at these little cakes. I couldn't get many."

"I wouldn't touch one of 'em with the broom handle!" Mrs. Fields was offended. "And one thing I'm bound to say. If you aim to get married, leave me alone here in my own house. I can live on cornpone and greens, I can chop my own stove wood if it comes down to that, but I can't stand being fussed at. And there can't nobody fix me over. I'm too old." She sniffed audibly and marched into the bedroom, her neck stiff.

Lucy flew to the door. "Mother—if you dare suggest such a thing—I haven't the slightest idea of marrying anybody!" She choked on her weak anger, let despair sink heavily into the bottom of her heart. It was no use—no use at all!

"Well, that's him a-knocking," stated her mother with acerbity. "You better let him in."

Stanley Daniels had a new overcoat and a jaunty new gray felt hat. Lucy let him in with a flutter, wishing that her throat would not get so pathetically red. She reached for the hat but Daniels did not surrender it.

"I was sent to bring you," he said. "They're having some kind of a meeting—going to get up a show. Marian Morgan told me to bring you."

"Oh—the Little Theatre. I heard about it. That will be fun. Wait till I put on my coat." Lucy hurried away thankfully.

Debtor Set the Collector An Example in Conduct

Doublex is noted for his nerve, his shortness of temper, and his scarcity of cash. While seated at a lonely breakfast in his club one morning a debt collector stormed in, and presented his bill.

"Sir," said Doublex, glaring at him, "is this all you know of the usages of decent society? To present a bill to a man breakfasting? Do you know that you are an intruder? If you wish to talk business, go outside and send in your card."

The collector went out and sent in his card. Doublex picked it up and read it.

"Tell the gentleman," he said sweetly, "that I am not in."

HIGH PRICES Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what, you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

Wednesday Dec. 25, 9:30 a. m., Worship service commemorating the Birth of Christ. You are welcome to worship with us—you are urged to worship some where.

The program Tuesday evening will be quite interesting to every one. We love to hear the tots bring their Christmas messages. But, the arrangement of this program is unique. Most of it has been written and adopted by our own persons, so that we will be giving a program that we can safely say you never saw before. At the close of this service we will have our White Gift offering. This can be anything in staple groceries, etc., to be brought to the Altar as a closing event. You are welcome to share this opportunity.

Another year will soon go into History. Another year's page, heavily laden with deeds is recorded, and we have helped to write it. Upon that record are many blessings we have received, let us be thankful for them. They give us cause to look forward for more in the coming year. But let us pause for a moment—

Each man gets out of the world of men the rebound, the increase and development of what he brings there. What life really brings us is but the dividends on what we have put into it. Those who have made the greatest impressions on earth have been those who gave themselves for the cause in which they were interested, whether in the nation, the church or home.

Surely we can make the coming year a happy year. And the Christmas Merry, Joy and Happiness are multiplied by dividing. Divide and Share with others.

Let me extend my personal Greetings for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to everyone who reads this.

The Story—An old couple who have prepared for the Christmas homecoming, of their dear ones have received word that the children and grandchildren will not be with them this holiday season. They are consoling each other on this fact when a loud report is heard off stage. The old gentleman goes to the door and learns from the driver of a large school bus that it was a blow-out and that he would have to go to town for repairs.

When the old couple learn that the bus is loaded with children on their way to the union school to assist in giving a Christmas program, they ask them in to warm themselves by the fire until the bus has been repaired. A happy time follows.

The Christmas tree prepared for their own grandchildren is brought in and decorated. The children then give their part of the performance for later in the evening, refreshments are served and all too soon the driver announces that the bus is ready. He also delivers to the old couple a special delivery letter he was asked to bring from town. The message contains the news that plans had been changed and that their dear ones would be with them on Christmas Day.

PRIMARY ROOM

The children of the primary room are going to have a Christmas party in the gym Friday afternoon. This party is being sponsored by the Student Council. They will have a 10c gift exchange at this time. The room is very attractively decorated with a Christmas tree and cotton Santa Claus made by the children.

Manning Hutson who underwent a major operation in Silver Cross hospital recently expects to return home Wednesday.

Miss Marilyn Rowley of Plainfield spent the week end with her aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Burch.

A rehearsal for the Christmas program to be given by the Wells Corner school and Homer Sunday School was held Wednesday night.

Choir practice was held Monday night with Earl Kopleman.

Don't forget the play "Dust of the Earth" which will be given Sunday night in the church. This is a royalty play and promises to be very good. Special musical numbers will be also given. A free will offering will be taken.

The musical held at the church Friday night was well attended. The program was: Violin solos by Thomas Wagner; piano solos by Marilyn Rowley; vocal solos by Earl Kopleman, accompanied by Eleanor Kopleman on the cornet; vocal and guitar solos and Willard Cagwin played a trombone solo. Ar-

YULETIDE PROGRAMS AT ST. PETER'S EV. CHURCH, FRANKFORT

In addition to the regular Sunday services and a special Christmas Service at 8:00 a. m. Christmas day the Bible School has again prepared three special programs for the holidays.

Sunday Evening December 22, 7:30

The first of the special programs given under the sponsorship of the Choir, the Young People and Adults, is a beautiful cantata pageant, "Good Will To Men" by Laura Bell and Ruth Dale. This program gives a rather startling answer to the question which is uppermost in all hearts of our day: How can peace come into a sin-sick, war-torn world?

A Jewish shepherd and a proud roman ruler find the chasm practically unbridgeable until by a chain of circumstances they are led to the manger in Bethlehem to find that, what had seemed an insurmountable difficulty, in reality does not even exist.

Both the music and the drama of this pageant are above the average and fully in keeping with the topic. Truly a modern presentation in an oriental setting.

Christmas Eve, Dec. 24, 7:00 P. M.

This program, in charge of the Beginners, Primaries and Juniors, has been prepared by the teachers of the Children's Division of the Bible School. A program by the little folks for the pleasure and entertainment of the Big Folks. The high point of the program is the Christmas Service "The Christmas Postman" by Charlotte Irene Ford and Floyd Engle. In recitation and song, the little folks tell of the deeper meaning of the Christmas Cards with their messages of cheer and good will. The choir for this program is the Junior Department.

As usual gifts will be distributed among the members of the children's division and also among the cradle roll members.

The offerings on the evenings of Dec. 22 and Dec. 24 will as usual be sent to the Orphanage and Old Folks Home in Bensonville, Ill.

New Year's Eve Dec. 24.

The New Year's Eve program will begin with a secular program during which the different age groups will present different types of entertainment. The Women's Union will participate in this program.

The focal point of this program will naturally be the midnight service. The committee in charge of this service is spending much effort and time in making this service helpful in facing the difficult problems of the new year.

We trust that not only the members but also the friends of our church and the strangers in our midst will come and enjoy the feast of good things which have been prepared for them. Let us cast aside the burdens of our week-a-day world and rejoice in the knowledge of a better world which God presents to us in the Child in Bethlehem's manger.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM OF THE GREEN GARDEN METHODIST CHURCH

The program will be given by the Sunday School Sunday, Dec. 22nd at 7:30 p. m. Supt. Edwin Bettenhausen will preside. Recitations, songs, playlets, etc., will make up the program, also special numbers by the Junior choir, led by Mabel Krapp. Mrs. Amanda Dralle will be chairman of the program and elaborate preparations have been made to assure a high type of a Christmas program this year. Misses Esther Bettenhausen and Bernice Krapp will be in charge of the music. The various departments will be led by Dorothy Krapp, Violette Bettenhausen and Sadie Bettenhausen. Strangers are welcome.

XMAS PROGRAM AT FRANKFORT METHODIST CHURCH

The program will be given by the Sunday school of which George Hasenjaeger is acting Supt. Mrs. Otto and Mrs. Frank Heiser will be in general charge of the fine program which will be given on Christmas Eve at 7:15 p. m. The Misses Vernette Hossbach, Marjorie Hasenjaeger Alvin Bettenhausen teachers of the various classes will assist in the program. Songs, Recitations and a Tableau entitled "The Search of the Shepherd" will be part of the rich and inspiring program. The Epworth League led by the President, Betty Mark will also take a leading part that evening. Rev. Rudolf Malek will preach the Christmas sermon Sunday, Dec. 22nd at 9:30 p. m. The Junior Choir will render a special Christmas number. A special Christmas Missionary Offering will be taken by the congregation in order to help at this time with the great need in other lands. Friends are welcome at all these services and are cordially invited.

TINLEY PARK METHODIST CHURCH TO PRESENT BEAUTIFUL PAGEANT

"Why the Chimes Rang?"

The older group of the church school, together with the Epworth League and the choir are co-operating in the presentation of the beautiful pageant, "Why the Chimes Rang". The setting of this pageant is in continental Europe in the location of a large cathedral whose chimes never rang, save at Christmas time and then only when a perfect gift was given to the Christ Child.

In preparing for this pageant, care was taken to make all the costumes authentic as can be. The cathedral act will consist of Helen Harper, Evelyn Schwartz, Marion Andrus, Jane DeVol, Frank Wright, Arthur DeVol, Marvin Bettenhausen and Wm. Bovik. The other characters are: Little Brother, Henry Bettenhausen; musician, Russell Johnson; Artist, Robert Schuldt. Laborers, Arthur and Norman Thurston, James Zimmermann and Howard Schudt. Rich girls, Joy Berg, Marion Hollstein, Betty Ringberg, Dorothy Buzzard. Knight, Bud Brandau. Rich woman, Violet Bettenhausen. Peasant woman, Norma Hardinger and Margaret Andrus. Acolyte, Russell Andrus. King, Bernard Andrus. Queen, Irene Lahti.

This pageant brings a Christmas message and applies it to living. Its dramatic approach is wonderful.

From the effect of previews and rumors, it no doubt, will have to be repeated again on the evening of Dec. 29th. With only a little more demand, this will become a necessity.

It is worth any one's trip to Tinley to see.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL

ORLAND PARK

Mokena 28—Orland 14

Orland's freshman team, with the aid of juniors, Pete Uthe and Bob Arnold, substituting, played a hard losing game against Mokena's well-drilled sophomore team. Maybe the date, being Friday the thirteenth, was the cause of Orland's defeat. Pete Uthe carried the load on offense.

Very few baskets were made in the territory assigned to Francis, Estand and Hewson.

Mokena's fast, much practiced team would be a good match for Orland's first team. It is unfortunate that their team is made up largely of sophomores, whereas our squad is almost entirely freshmen and juniors. This makes it difficult to arrange a game fair to both schools, especially so, since our team is able to practice only once a week.

We hope to be able to arrange a game with Mokena for our first team before the season is over.

Orland's two peppy cheerleading teams had stiff competition against Mokena's team.

Again Bill Schakow provided music with his accordin.

PTA NEWS

The PTA met in regular session December 12th. Following the business meeting, Mr. P. G. Rawland, principal of the Orland Park schools gave a short talk on a method of visual education devised and recommended by the National Educational Forum. He illustrated his talk with charts.

Mr. Frank Coats, pastor of the Garfield Park Methodist church delivered a timely message on "The Qualifications and Ideals that 'Tomorrow's Citizen' must have", in order that he may become a good citizen. Mr. Coats is a forceful speaker and has a dynamic personality and succeeded in bringing home to his hearers the vital points of of his message. Several years ago he served as pastor of the Lemont Methodist church and was then a frequent visitor in our community. We enjoyed hearing him again.

In keeping of the Christmas season a portion of the program was given over to the singing of Christmas carols, enjoyed by all. Through the courtesy of the Orland Park Woman's Club, several recordings of Christmas music were played by Mrs. H. Adele Cooper. Following the meeting refreshments were served and an informal reception was held for Mr. Coats.

Those who have not registered for the permanent registration may do so at the village clerk's office up to and including Jan. 21, 1941.

La Befana, Penitent Old Woman, Brings Christmas Gifts in Italy

Santa Claus doesn't visit children in Italy. It isn't because they are all naughty, but because there is no Santa Claus—in Italy.

No one runs down to a well decorated tree on Christmas morning to look for presents. Brightly colored flowers decorate the room instead of Christmas trees, and presents are not exchanged until January 6.

On that night, an old, old lady, La Befana, walks from house to house and leaves a present beside each little child she visits.

Exactly 1,940 years ago, according to the Italian legend, La Befana was very busy sweeping her kitchen when several men dressed like kings stopped in front of her cottage. They asked her where Bethlehem was, but she had never heard of it.

The men told her about a baby which had been born in Bethlehem, and mentioned a star which had been guiding them. The old lady wished she could accompany them when they left her in search of the infant Jesus.

But La Befana stayed home. It was getting too dark out, and besides, the baby could wait until tomorrow. Later that night she noticed the sky quivering with light. The clouds seemed to take the form of angels. All thought of sleep left her. Rising, she carefully wrapped two gifts for the Holy Baby, then ran out into the night in the direction the kings had gone.

Fast as she hurried, she had not reached Bethlehem when the star disappeared and dawn filled the sky. She frantically asked the way to Bethlehem, but no one could tell her.

And so La Befana has constantly traveled since that day, searching for the Christ Child. On the Epiphany, 12 days after Christmas, she goes from house to house, looking into the faces of babies. With each she leaves a gift, hoping that at last she will give her presents to the right child.

Christmas Card Was Invented By a Man With Many Friends

This is believed to be the first Christmas card. It was made in London in 1846.

CHRISTMAS cards are almost as much a part of Christmas as Santa Claus himself, yet they have been in use less than a century.

According to most records, the first Christmas card was designed in 1846 by Mr. J. C. Horsley, a prominent member of the Royal Academy of London. It was produced at the request of Sir Henry Cole, a popular man with many friends.

Sir Cole wondered how he could express his personal Christmas greeting to a thousand friends spread throughout England. After dismissing the thought of visiting each personally, or giving presents, he decided to send them each a card by mail.

One thousand hand colored cards were prepared with a picture showing a jolly family seated at a huge dinner table. Each member of the family was looking into a brimming glass which he held in his hand.

When these cards were distributed, they raised a furor among temperance proponents throughout the country. The disturbance focused nation-wide attention on the new greeting card.

It was not until several years later, however, that the first lithographed Christmas card made its appearance. Originality was almost completely lacking. The greeting was invariably "A Merry Christmas" or "A Jolly Christmas." Designs seldom had anything to do with the season, but contained pictures of birds, flowers, animals or children.

America soon adopted the British custom, and the Christmas card was born.

of the card and cover does not exceed two ounces.

Letters may not be enclosed with Christmas packages. Such enclosure would make the package first-class. In fourth class or parcel post packages, written greetings such as "Merry Christmas," with identifying names, may be enclosed. Books may bear simple non-personal dedicatory inscriptions. They are carried at a special rate of one and one-half cents per pound.

Put Proper Postage On Christmas Mail

Unsealed Christmas cards will carry for one and one-half cents postage. These cards may bear a simple inscription, which must not be in the nature of personal correspondence. Examples: "Sincerely yours," "With Best Wishes," "Merry Christmas." Be sure the weight

MONKEYING WITH THE BIG SHOW

From Sarasota comes the word that the circus of 1941 will have more ruffles than ever. It has been going. Hollywood for the past few seasons, but next year the biggest show on earth will look like something out of the "Arabian Nights" via Metro-Goldwyn.

Norman Bel Geddes has been retained by the Ringlings to streamline, decorate and dress the big show from the peanut bag to the elephants; and circus addicts who like their circus plain and a bit odoriferous are worried. It may be hard to tell the 1941 show from a night club interior.

The circus of tradition had faded costumes, a hard-boiled Queen of Sheba and a Maharajah of Indore who had two cauliflower ears and a broken nose.

Cinderella and her ladies generally had the appearance of being refugees from a midway.

The Fairy Prince had fallen arches, a three-days' growth of beard and a middle tooth missing. And the Caliph of Bagdad seemed freshly bounced from a corner saloon.

But the old-time circus fan was satisfied. He didn't expect too much.

There was something rough, catch-as-catch-can and impromptu about the big show that was appealing. If you wanted art and beauty you went to a musical show or a museum. And a circus had to smell like a circus, too.

But the big top woke up one spring morning and found that it had been to the beauty parlor, caliphs, princes, maharajahs, princesses, elephants, ponies and all.

When the bands blared for the opening pageant that season there wasn't a plug-ugly in the parade.

That would have been all right with the old-time circus-addict if they had stopped there. But the circus management went in head over heels for glamour.

They rouged the elephant's toenails, powdered the gorilla's nose and made even the hostlers wash behind the ears. They hired beautiful showgirls, introduced the De Mille, the surrealist, and the De Sylva influence in one movement, and even went in for air conditioning the circus tent.

If you want your circus straight, with all the smells that had become traditional, you had to stay down near the camels and sea lions.

And it looks like a non-top trend. Norman Bel Geddes is now reported working on the tents. That looks like carrying the glamour stuff too far. A circus tent has always looked like a circus tent. What it will look like in 1941 is anybody's guess.

SHARING THE SHEPHERD'S JOY (Christmas Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:8-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.—Luke 2:14.

Tinsel and toys, snow and sleigh bells, crowded department stores and rushing throngs, gifts and greeting cards, Christmas dinner and fellowship with family and friends—is that all Christmas means to us? All these things are proper in their place—exciting and interesting—but they are not enough.

They have never been enough and certainly they will not do this year, with a world in chaos. We need not lose any of the thrilling enjoyment of Christmas by properly observing the day; in fact, we shall only enhance its meaning and bring out its real glory by keeping Christ at the heart of our Christmas.

The opening verses of Luke 2 tell us of the coming of Mary with Joseph to God's appointed place at His appointed time for the coming into this world of His Son to be made flesh and dwell among us (John 1:14). Our lesson tells us of

I. Good Tidings of Great Joy (vv. 8-14).

God had good news for the people of this world and He gave it, as was His custom, to those who were faithfully discharging their humble duties (cf. Judg. 6:11, 12; 1 Kings 19:19). God is still ready to reveal His glory and grace in the "office, kitchen, mill, barn school-room, and open field—places where people are at work on daily tasks" (Douglas). You need not be in the great church in a large city to meet Him on Christmas day. He will reveal Himself in all His beauty where you are, though you be in the humblest surroundings and at the most menial task. Look for Him!

Jesus came as a Saviour. "The world did not want an adviser. The world had advised itself almost into hell. The world did not ask for a speculator. Everything that man could do had been done, and men sat in the darkness of their own wisdom. The world did not want a reformer, a man who could change his outward and transient relations, an engineer that would continually devote his time (for appropriate remuneration) to the readjustment of the wheels and the pulleys and the various mechanical forces of society. The world wanted a saviour" (Joseph Parker).

Note that the army of heaven came to declare peace, not war; but only to those in "whom He is well pleased" (v. 14, R. V.). As long as men serve the devil and displease God, they will have no peace.

II. Great Faith and Consistent Action (vv. 15, 16).

The shepherds did not say, "Let us now go and see if this thing has come to pass," or "which we expect or hope will come to pass," but said, "which is come to pass." They went not to test God's word, but in the assurance that they would "see" what had come to pass. Blessed faith! Let us too believe God's word to us.

But "faith without works is dead" (James 2:17). The shepherds might have made many excuses for not going but "they came" and "found" the Saviour. Perhaps you who read these words have failed at that point; you have not come to Jesus as your Saviour. No more appropriate time could be found to come than right now. Believe, then act on your faith.

Some of us who are Christians need also to learn of the shepherds. We talk a great deal about our devotion to Christ. Especially at this Christmas season we render much "lip service" to Him. Let us make it real, and our lives virile and active for Him.

III. Good News for Meditation and Proclamation (vv. 17-20).

The gospel is literally "good news." What a blessed privilege it is to have such good news in a day of evil tidings, of darkness and despair.

There are two things we ought to do with the gospel of God's redeeming grace. We should make it known to the ends of the earth, but we should also do as Mary, "who kept all these things and pondered them in her heart." We know she had special reasons for doing so, but may we not suggest that you too make this Christmas a time when you will ponder in your own heart what God has done for you in Christ?

The shepherds also set us a Christmas example, for they "made known abroad" the coming of the Saviour. Will you tell someone else today? Will you, like the shepherds, be "glorifying and praising God" this Christmas? You will if you, like them, go to the manger and meet Jesus. If you go to this world's empty show of celebration, you will return empty (see v. 20).

May the blessed peace of Christ be yours this Christmas. That is my wish from the heart to you

HOW TO SEW

THERE are fascinating new transparent materials on the market now. Luncheon sets and aprons and rain coats and closet accessories all take on new glamour when made of them, and you

AROUND THE HOUSE

Ammonia and water will remove red ink stains from white cloth.

Pumpkin pies will have that rich brown tint if a tablespoon of molasses is added to the filling.

One pound of powdered or confectioner's sugar is equivalent to 2½ cupfuls; one pound of granulated sugar equals two cupfuls.

Use needles to pin down the pleats when pressing a pleated skirt. The needles will leave no marks when you remove them.

Before squeezing the juice from your lemons and oranges, grate the peel. Wrapped in waxed paper these gratings will keep in the refrigerator for future use in making desserts, etc.

For Busy Shoppers

Winning popular approval with busy Christmas shoppers are the two handsome gift packages of Camel cigarettes featured by local dealers. The regular Camel carton—10 packs of "20's"—comes in a colorful, holiday dress. Equally striking is the gay Camel package of 4 "flat fifties."

Both packages contain 200 cigarettes—are easy gifts to get, perfect to receive.—Adv.

will find that every left-over scrap will be used for something that is attractive and worth while.

Less than 50 cents' worth of this window-pane clear material made the hat cover, underwear case and two glove cases like the one shown here. All the directions for cutting and making the hat cover are given here in the sketch. The material from two corners made the square underwear case. The material from each of the other two corners was folded to make a glove or handkerchief case. Bright blue bias tape was used for seam binding and the bottom facing and loop handle of the hat cover; and colored zippers to match the bindings were used for the case closings.

Happy Hours Ahead

A gift to make many happy hours for pipe and "makin's" smokers is the Prince Albert Christmas package—one full pound of ripe, rich-tasting, mellow tobacco. Colorful holiday wrappers put these popular presents in gay Christmas setting—and a handy gift card is enclosed. Your regular tobacco dealer has the one-pound gift tin of Prince Albert on display. Remember! Prince Albert is the cooler-burning tobacco—the National Joy Smoke.—Adv.

Laughter is a most healthful exertion; it is one of the greatest helps to digestion with which I am acquainted; and the custom prevalent among our forefathers, of exciting it at table by jesters and buffoons, was founded on true medical principles.—Dr. Hufeland.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.
